Dear Renata Hesse I have closely followed the Governments unwarranted attack upon Microsoft on behalf of Microsoft s multi-millionaire competitors whose companies cannot compete well in the technology market and who seek to destroy Microsoft in their greed to make more millions of dollars while providing a high-priced user unfriendly and partially defective. product. There is no way that Microsoft cannot be considered a monopoly when it has buy consumer choice 80% of the market. I would think the Government would be proud to have an American company as the free world leader n computers and computer software. Instead the Government at the urging and money contributons of Microsoft s competitors are intent in destroying this great American icon. How shameful this is and what a laughing stock the USA government is making of itself to the rest of the world. Please do your job and stop this thrashing of the leading software company in the world. There are many other worthwhile areas for the Justice Dept to concern themselves with than carrying the water for incapable millionaire technologists. Sincerely Harold V.
